CALLS DARROW WITNESSES PERJURERS

Fredericks Scores Attorney Darrow—Latter Closes With Flow of Oratory.

CASE ABOUT READY FOR THE TIRED JURY

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 16.—There was no desire on his part to protect the local attorneys of the McNamara defense in the bribery scandal, according to district attorney Fredericks, who resumed today his closing argument in the trial of Clarence S. Darrow.

The defendant had charged that the district attorney held his former associates immune from prosecution because they lived in Los Angeles and he, Darrow, was a stranger.

Fredericks declares that the bribery must have been instigated by an attorney in the McNamara case, but that none of the attorneys knew what Bert Franklin, the briber, was doing but Darrow.

Fredericks attacked the important witnesses for the defense, branding most of them as perjurers, the half dozen newspaper men who impeached Franklin's testimony alone having been absolved from that characterization.

The prosecutor then went into an analysis of the state's evidence as to the various alleged offenses charged against Darrow during his preparation of the McNamara case.

"There was not a week during that time," declared Fredericks, "that the defendant was not committing some crime against justice."

Two word portraits of Clarence S. Darrow, wholly different, were held before the jury in the Darrow bribery trial yesterday. The first, by Darrow himself, at the close of a remarkable plea in his own behalf, painted him as the life long friend of the poor and oppressed, ready to sacrifice himself to better their condition.

The other, drawn at the beginning of the final argument by district attorney John B. Fredericks, presented Darrow as an enemy of society, inciting class hatred and "shedding maudlin tears of sympathy for murderers and dynamiters."

The prosecutor will consume all of tomorrow in concluding his argument.

Still under the spell of the defendant's eloquence, hundreds thronged the courtroom at the afternoon session to hear captain Fredericks make the closing argument of the prosecution in the trial which began its fourth month today. He said he would not attempt to compete in oratory with Darrow, whose persuasive eloquence and pathetic plea had caused jury court officials and spectators to weep. "You have listened," said captain Fredericks, "to one of the most marvelous addresses or orations ever delivered in any court room, when you heard Mr. Darrow, but history teaches us that the most brainy men have gone wrong. This defendant's unfortunate predicament is the result of peculiar philosophical views which go to make up his very nature. His ingenious hand entered into bribery from the very beginning of the McNamara case; bribery is in his very nature. He had the idea that there was no integrity that could not be bought."

Lands Detective Burns. Fredericks declared that no one but Darrow could have been the man who provided the bribe money. He lauded W. J. Burns as "having done more during the last 10 years to uphold the cause of civic righteousness, civic decency and civic honesty, than any other man in America."

Referring to John R. Harrington, the prosecutor said the actions of Darrow's former employer might not have been ethical but they saved his honesty. "I believe Harrington's duty to the state," he said, "to have been fully as great as the concealment of the criminal acts of his friends."

Darrow Closes. The McNamaras figured strongly in the closing argument of Darrow. "I know," he said, "I could have tried that case and a large number of people of America would have believed honestly, if these men had not been hanged, that they were guilty. I know it and you know it. And I could have saved myself had I done it, and I could have made money. I know if you had hanged those men and other men you would not have changed the opinion of hardly a man in America, except to settle in the hearts of a great mass of men a hatred so deep, so profound, that it would never die away."

"So it would have ended, and who would have been the result? We would have taken their lives in their hands to avenge a wrong to their class. "And I took the responsibility, gentlemen. Maybe I did wrong. I took it and the matter was disposed of and the question set at rest. Here and there I got praise for what was called a heroic act, but where I got one word of praise I got a thousand words of blame and I stood under that for a year."

Trial Helped Clear Up Things. "This trial has helped clear it up. It will be cleared up; if not in time for me to profit by it, in time for my descendants to know it. I know the crowd. In a way I love them; in a way I despise them. I know the unreasonable unthinking mass. I have been their idol and I have gone down into the depths of the valley and heard them hiss at my name—this same mob, but I have summoned such devotion and such courage as God has given me and I have gone on my path."

Breakfast Monotony

—the same old chops, or bacon and eggs, and biscuit, for breakfast—may be avoided.

For a change, try this ideal breakfast:

Some fresh fruit
Saucer of Grape-Nuts and cream
A soft-boiled egg
Some nice crisp toast
A cup of Postum

This will give you an ideal combination of the three principal food elements—proteids, carbohydrates and fats—in the most easily digestible form.

And it means a wide awake individual with energy and a clear head to make a stir in the world; it replaces that dull, sluggish feeling which so often follows the too-much-meat-and-biscuit breakfast.

The man who has work to do can't afford to be overloaded with the kind of food that requires undue effort on the part of his digestive organs for a time and leaves him with a "gone feeling" just about the time of day when he needs his best mental and physical powers.

Grape-Nuts food affords real strength of mind and body with little effort (or waste force) in getting it converted in the system into energy and staying-power—the power to act and to endure.
